

careless and they don't catch those, where you catch them is between times of debate. And if you have three or four bills that you keep track of, you probably know everything about those three or four bills. If you try to keep track of every bill, that Final Reading period is not going to be the final savior for you. I daresay that I could pick out any bill on Final Reading and try to put a bug in somebody's ear. Senator Chambers has been more than gracious to me on a couple occasions of finding things that I didn't see. That didn't occur while he was reading it and catching it during Final Reading. It's because, ahead of time, he'd been through that and looked at it and found those things. Now he's also found a couple of things that I don't think were there, and he's made issues of it, but that's the way the system works. That's all right. And what do we do with it? When you have mistakes you pull a bill back from Final Reading and amend it. We did that yesterday, we pulled it back to discuss it. We've pulled bills off of E & R Final before they were printed because we found mistakes. And what happens, if we do have a mistake, does the world stop? Does it end? Of course, it doesn't end. What happens? We have another bill that's coming on later in the session, and we fix it there. That happens frequently, or...

SENATOR HALL: One minute.

SENATOR KRISTENSEN: ...if you have a bill that's got a major mistake, you have a bill another year. We do that all the time. The world is not going to end. And for those who want to make their life easier because it's simpler to sit there and just listen to the drone, and they don't have to think because that's really what this is all about, during Final Reading you don't have to think, you just put in your time, I suggest you're not doing your job. I'd oppose the Chambers amendment. Thank you.

SENATOR HALL: Thank you, Senator Kristensen. Senator Withem, your light is next.

SPEAKER WITHEM: Yes, Mr. President, members of the body, I rise in opposition to the Chambers amendment, in general, supportive of LR 15, and was going to wait and enter into the debate when my amendment came up, but I think it might be worthwhile to the members of the body who are sitting in contemplation as to how to vote on this measure at this point to be aware that there is another proposal that will be coming forward that...and as I understood Senator Kristensen indicating that he had, in
